SEATTLE, WASHINGTON

A freelance writer since 1982, Braiden Rex-Johnson has been in love with the food, wine, and people of the Pacific Northwest for close to twenty years. She has documented this relationship in a number of magazines and bestselling cookbooks, including the Pike Place Market series of books and Pacific Northwest Wining & Dining. She is the long-time food-and-wine-pairing columnist for Wine Press Northwest, a regular contributor to the Seattle Times Pacific Northwest magazine, contributes to Amazon.com's Al Dente blog, and is an active member of the Seattle chapter of Les Dames d'Escoffier International (LDEI). She and her husband, Spencer, live in a condominium a salmon toss from the Pike Place Market, which Braiden visits several times a week for sustenance and inspiration.
